

Summer Reading Challenge

Letter to Families:

Attention Louisville Lions:

The FIRST Summer Reading Challenge is here, and #lpslionsread is catching fire! This summer, teachers are challenging families to represent the Lions! Teachers think they can read more minutes than your ENTIRE GRADE over the summer. Elementary students will compete against their teachers next year and middle school will challenge the middle school teaching team. Don't let the teachers win! Show us what you've got!! Do your part to make sure the kids are victorious!

How can you do your part? Attached you will find a summer reading log. Fill it out all summer long. Return it next fall during the first week of school to your homeroom teacher. The library team will combine all the minutes read by your grade level. If your grade is successful in beating the teachers, you'll get to have a class party!

But wait, there's more! YOUR FAMILY can help your classroom win too by participating in their OWN personal reading challenge. Every student and family member (GRANDPARENTS TOO) that turns in a card will be entered into a drawing and the chance of winning some fabulous prizes!

Many of you also take part in the summer reading program at the public library. That's great! You can count those minutes on this reading log, too. Also, you don't have to read alone. Students can read together with a parent, grandparent, brother, sister, friend, babysitter, or another adult. Start out the summer by reading your Scholastic Summer Read and counting those minutes!

Each time you read this summer, enter it on the log. And remember, it doesn't have to be a book. You can count the minutes you spend reading a magazine or newspaper, listening to an audio book, reading comics and graphic novels as well.

Let the challenge begin! Fill out your reading log all summer long and return it with a parent signature and your totaled minutes. Help your grade level beat the teachers!
